RE: WC Docket No. 05-337

Dear Sirs:

On behalf of the Alabama Farmers Federation, an affiliate of the American Farm Bureau, representing more than 458,000 members throughout the state, I am writing in connection with the above-referenced proceeding. Farmers and those living in rural and remote areas of the country need access to wireless technologies, not just for personal convenience but also for their livelihood and safety during emergencies and natural disasters.

It is our understanding that the Universal Service Joint Board's recommendation to cap competitive carriers' draw from the high cost fund would severely limit wireless technology, the very one that has permitted farmers to finally gain access to robust telecommunications services that urban and suburban residents have enjoyed for years.

Family farmers and small businesses and people living in rural areas need reliable wireless services as much as they need reliable fixed line telephone services. It is imperative to have wireless communications to attract economic development projects to rural Alabama. I do not think there is a financial or public policy justification to recommend reducing the level of USF support to wireless telephone companies serving rural communities when the wireless telephone industry, as I understand it, is annually contributing three times as much to the USF as is being spent to assist wireless phone companies meet their obligations to provide service to rural America.

We encourage the Joint Board to act on this recommendation to enhance the ability of wireless providers to maintain – and expand services, especially in rural areas. Consider the importance of widespread wireless coverage needed during the hurricanes in the past few years and during the recent tornadoes that have ravaged Alabama.

Wireless services not only have saved lives but also allowed first responders to better coordinate their relief efforts, all because of access to wireless services in rural communities. It is unlikely that the residents of these communities believe, as the Joint Board apparently concluded, that our nation today invests too many resources into assuring that all Americans have access to reliable wireless telephone service.

In the great American tradition of innovation, technology and customer service, the consumer always wins when they can choose among competitive services – even in hard-to-reach rural areas that increasingly depend on mobile-based telecommunications. Please join us in our support of enhancing wireless communications to rural areas and institute reforms that benefit all consumers.

Sincerely,

Mike Kilgore
